IBM Bob Client Profile Mode

</The Fantastic Four> Chris Zhou, Connor Lam, Genevieve Kporjroh, Lovnyth Valcin

The Problem:

- Early-career consultants need to understand a client fast.
- Manual research is slow, scattered and full of noise.
- Unprepared starts cost time and client trust.

Our Solution:

- Type a client name, get a one-page client profile.
- Covers business, financials, leadership, strategy and IBM-relevant partners.
- Works for public companies and government bodies, like school districts.
- Every fact links to its public source, so consultants can verify it.

What It Does:

1. The user enters their client name in the Bob workspace.
2. Bob calls multiple tools connected through MCP (Model Context Protocol) to pull information from different sources.
3. Bob combines and condenses the results into the sections IBM Consulting Associates ranked as most crucial.
4. A structured PDF onboarding report is generated.

Bob's Impact:

- Custom MCP server: Bob built 11 tools covering SEC filings, financials, news, web pages and PDF export.
- Custom mode and playbook: Bob wrote the workflow, what to include or omit, and how to cite, plus a feedback loop.
- Source integrity: the exporter cites only links tools returned and enforces a hard one-page limit.
